

Contents

Foreword	9
Chapter 1
An overall view	13
Chapter 2
The roots of civil economy	27
1. The Middle Ages, monastic culture and the invention of economic discourse	27
2. Doux , civil commerce	30
3. Poverty, wealth and reciprocity	34
4. Gift and reciprocity as a way to the market	41
Chapter 3
Civic humanism: The blossoming of the Middle Ages and the unfulfilled dawn of modernity	45
1. Civic humanism ... and more	45
2. The utopia of humanism	51
3. Civil darkness	57
4. Towards a new ontology of the civil	67
5. Public happiness	70
Chapter 4
The science of “good social living”: Italian enlightenment and civil economy	77
1. The Neapolitan golden season	77
2. Civil economy’s words	80
3. The Milanese school	96

Chapter 5

The English tradition: From the humanist Adam Smith to Robinson Crusoe economics	101
1. Smith: The market as an instrument for civil society	101
2. Market and sociality	104
3. The political economy after Smith: the birth of Robinson Crusoe economics	107
4. The rest of the English	117

Chapter 6

From the eclipse of civil economy to its rebirth	123
1. The individualist statute in twentieth century economics	123
2. The third sector in the “state and market” model of social order	133
3. Are NPOs transitional organizations?	141
4. Interest in civil economy picks up	146

Chapter 7

About the identity of the subjects of civil economy	159
1. Introduction	159
2. Principle of reciprocity and principle of exchange of equivalents	163
3. Voluntary organizations and the principle of reciprocity	176
4. The specific identities of social enterprises and civil enterprises	181
5. The social and civil enterprises’ capacity to contaminate	189

Chapter 8

Employment, welfare society, civil economy	197
1. Uncertainty in the opulent society	197
2. From full employment to full occupation	201
3. The nonviability of employment's new golden rule	205
4. The proposal of civil economy	210
5. From 'welfare state' to 'civil welfare'	215
6. Social-quality markets	222
7. The capability approach and the principle of subsidiarity	228

Chapter 9

Happiness, again	233
1. The Easterlin paradox	233
2. Positional happiness	237
3. Relational goods	239
4. Happiness as relationship	245
5. Why are we making mistakes in calculating happiness?	247
6. The fragile strength of relational happiness	250

Chapter 10

Finale	253
Bibliography	259
Index	273